Corn as high as an elephant's eye?

Unusual land use is cropping up at a vacant city lot not far from the I Street Bridge

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

SARA BERNAL has plans for an unused city lot that used to have bad soil. She's part of a project involving the City of West Sacramento and a Yolo County nonprofit that promotes agricultural education.

(News-Ledger photo)

There is sudden new activity on that old, city-owned vacant lot at the corner of 5th and C streets in West Sacramento's old "Washington" neighborhood. New soil has been dropped off, and a tractor is leveling it out. People are bustling about onsite.

The lot is surrounded by elements of urban West Sacramento old and new:

Just west lies the popular new Broderick Roadhouse pub. A couple blocks east is the venerable old I Street Bridge. Across the street is a liquor store. Passersby include commuters, students, the residents of nearby homes, and various denizens of the city's streets.

So what are they building on this two-thirds-acre piece of urban infill? Will it be new townhouses or apartments, like those going up elsewhere on the West Sac riverfront? A mixed-use building? A restaurant?

The answer is probably not your first guess. What they're building is a farm.

Sara Bernal was on site yesterday, supervising the spreading of a new layer of topsoil. She will be the first farmer at the temporary "urban farm" at 427 C Street.

"My goal is to have the irrigation system built by next week," said Bernal. "I hope to start planting in two weeks."

What crops are going in?

"Lots of heirloom tomatoes, baby green mixes, cucumbers, melons, summer squash, onions, carrots and radishes, eggplants and peppers," she started to list.

Bernal has small-farm experience, including producing for "subscribers" and for farmers markets. She hopes to sell her veggies at farmers markets – including West Sacramento's – and at restaurants – including nearby "Broderick."

"In 30 days, we will have baby lettuce and small radishes," said Bernal.

This "urban farm" project is the first partnership between the city and the Center for Land-Based Learning, headquartered in Winters. The city hopes to make available various vacant sites for use as temporary, rotating small farms. The Center for Land-Based Learning, which supports training for farmers, has leased this city lot for $1 per year for five years.

Mayor Christopher Cabaldon says the neighborhood and the city get several different things

Streetcar project gets a bump up

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Mayor Christopher Cabaldon reported yesterday that the Sacramento/West Sacramento streetcar project has hit a milestone in the process of earning federal funding.

"I just got word we're approved to move into 'project development' for the streetcar," said Cabaldon. "We're now a 'federal project.' It's not approved yet as a final project."

Among other things, the new status means that money spent by the two cities can be counted later towards a required "local match" of dollars for the streetcar system.

The first phase of the streetcar line is envisioned to send one spur across the bridge down the middle of West Capitol Avenue in West Sacramento, terminating at city hall and the transit center at the 1100-block of the street. City officials would like to later extend the spur further west on West Capitol. They'd also like to add a north-south branch that might stretch (tentatively) from the CalSTRS and ziggurat buildings in the north down into Southport, said Cabaldon.

The first phase of the line would wind through downtown Sacramento, with stops near the planned new arena, the railyards, downtown and midtown.

Planners hope to open the line in 2017.

"We have a lot of work to do yet," Cabaldon told the News-Ledger. "We identified the 2017 timeline about a year ago, and all the ducks are lined up."

Cabaldon reported the news from amid the annual "Capital to Capital" trip, in which leaders from all around the Sacramento

Whooo is that in the trees?

by Mary K. Hanson
Tuleyome Association

I was walking with my dog through a stretch of riparian (river side) habitat in the region, and was suddenly attracted to the sound of a group of Acorn Woodpeckers, high up in the trees, having a squawking fit over something, so I went to see what the problem was.

At first, all I saw was the woodpeckers themselves. They were in quite a tizzy, shouting their loud rasping calls as they jumped from branch to branch, flashing their wings. I couldn't see anything in the tree that might have been the cause of such a ruckus, however, so I looked around a bit more. And then I spotted it.

In another tree just a few feet away was a huge Great Horned Owl (Bubo virginianus).

Basking in the early morning sun, he swiveled his large head around, looked at me with sleepy amber-gold eyes and then proceeded to completely ignore me. I couldn't ignore him, though. In fact, I think I stood there

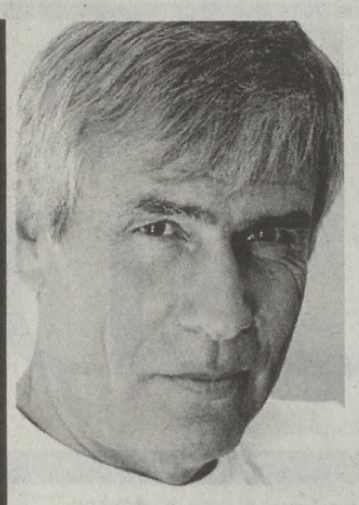
Whatever happened to good manners?

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

A friend and I were talking the other day and our conversation somehow turned to the subject of good manners. We both agreed that good etiquette was fast disappearing in this country and that our society was much less civil because of it. At the top of her list was all the public cussing that goes on nowadays, especially by young kids at the school where she teaches. We also covered everything from people no longer being punctual to poor table manners (chewing with your mouth open and slurping liquids) to letting everything hang out, be it men's bellies or women's breasts.

"People having good manners is a much bigger deal than most people think," she said, "and how hard can it be to send someone a thank you note, or cover your mouth when you cough, or not play your music too loud, or not interrupt others when they are speaking?"

Anyway, as much as my friend hated to see good manners going the way of the dinosaur, I was quite surprised when she said that wasn't the case when it comes to chivalry, and that part of our little chat went something like this:

"You know," she said, "some women simply don't want men holding doors open for them anymore and I'm one of them. For example, the other day some man ran ahead of me at the post office just to open the door for me and it made me feel uncomfortable and seemed so silly. I mean, I am a grown woman and perfectly capable of pushing open my own door."

"Did you say thank you?"

"Of course! I was raised to say please and thank you, but this door opening thing seems so unnecessary, especially in public places."

"Are you okay with a guy opening your car door for you?"

"Not really. And I don't like it when a man pulls out a chair for me when we're eating out, either."

"Why's that?"

"It just makes me uncomfortable to have someone standing behind me. Plus a friend of mine once pulled a chair out from underneath me thinking he was being funny and I broke my tailbone when I hit the floor. So whether it's chairs or doors, I would much rather just deal with them myself."

"Car door good manners can actually be a pretty interesting thing," I said. "Did you ever see that old movie that had a great scene in it about what good car door manners can tell you about a woman?"

"No."

"Well, this old Italian gangster told a teenage admirer that he should never marry a woman who didn't have good car door manners."

"You mean that the woman should open the door for the man?"

"No, not the door – just the lock."

"I'm afraid I'm not following this."

"Well, the teenager in the movie was getting serious about the girl he was dating, so the gangster told him she needed to pass the door lock test before he should even think about marrying her."

"The door lock test?"

"It goes like this. You ask your girlfriend out on a date and when you pick her up, before you go to the front door to get her, you make sure your driver's side door is locked. Then when the two of you return to the car, you open up her door for her and let her slide inside. Then you slowly go around behind the car to the driver's side and give her plenty of time to reach over and unlock your door for you. And if she doesn't do it, then you basically need to start dating someone else."

"You're kidding me? You break up with someone just because they don't unlock your door for you?"

'I guess the gangster was from the old school and when he wasn't out knocking people off, he wanted to be at home with a wife who was kind and thoughtful and put her man first,' she said.

"Yes."

"Why?"

"Oh, all kinds of reasons, which is why it's such a great test. To begin with, I guess the gangster was from the old school and when he wasn't out knocking people off, he wanted to be at home with a wife who was kind and thoughtful and put her man first, although if you ask me, the key to the test is that it will tell you if the girl you are dating is self-absorbed and lazy, and if she is, you need to be running for the hills."

"Well," said my friend with emphasis, "if you ask me, not only is that a really stupid and worthless test, but it's also terribly outdated, since cars have electronic door lock openers nowadays that can be activated a block before you even reach your car. And if a girl is dating a guy who is driving some old jalopy with doors that still need to be unlocked by hand, then she is the one who needs to be running for the hills!"

out of the relationship.

"First, it's the rejuvenation of a public-owned parcel that's been almost thrown away for a full generation," he told the News-Ledger. "(Vacant lots) continue to be safety issues. We want to have activity there."

Then, there's the opportunity to help train new farmers and get them a start in their profession. West Sacramento officials are seeking to make the city a "food hub," central to food production and processing.

"For most of recorded history, you became a farmer because you grew up on a farm," he said. "Today, there's a whole new crop of young people who want to be a farmer, but their parents don't own a farm. They don't have the land to begin farming. So reason number two for this is to incubate farmers."

"Third is that we want to create new options for local neighbors and kids, so they're connected to farms and can buy more healthy food. (The fourth reason is) we really want to create a pipeline for local restaurants to locally-source specialty produce. You saw that with Dan Gannon's farm in Southport, and the Eatery."

The Eatery was a well-regarded Southport restaurant that often served local produce such as Gannon's. The restaurant recently closed for financial reasons.

"One key feature is that this will be a temporary use," said Cabaldon of the C Street farm. "Five years from now, it could be a mixed-use building with people living upstairs and a restaurant or book store down below. When that happens, we and others have plenty of other vacant properties in the city."

Mary Kimball is executive director of the Center for Land-Based Learning, which is leasing the vacant lot and has hired Bernal as the farm manager. She said this project is made possible primarily by Wells Fargo, with help from Community Business Bank and other sponsors. Soil on the lot was so poor that they trucked in 600 cubic yards of (slightly aromatic) composted topsoil.

"It's kind of surprising how much even a half acre can produce," said Kimball. "Two of our graduates are going to help (Bernal.) It's all going to be vegetable produce – it will be for really different markets, like restaurants. 'Broderick' restaurant has put in an order for what to grow."

The produce will also be sold at farmers' markets and farmstands, and possibly through a "CSA" program ("community supported agriculture," in which consumers sign up to receive a portion of the produce).

The urban farm fits with her organization's mission.

"We have a beginning farmer training program called the California Farm Academy," said Kimball. "Each year, we graduate about 20 farmers into the community."

Sara Bernal hopes sales from the C Street farm help cover her own salary as farm manager for the plot.

Is she worried about people vandalizing the little farm, or walking off with the "fruits" of her labor?

"Oh yeah, definitely," answered Bernal. "Unfortunately, we can't afford to fence it off. We're hoping people will see how much work we put in, and leave it alone. I'm sure it will happen, though."

City officials are holding a groundbreaking for the urban farm at 10 a.m. on Friday at 427 C Street.

And in case you're wondering, the West Sacramento Farmers Market is scheduled to open for the season on May 29; look for information on the Thursday-afternoon market on Facebook.

Owls are one of the most easily recognizable owls in the country, but I'd never seen one this close up before. I was mesmerized.

Sometimes called "Cat Owls" because of their ear-like tufts, Great Horned Owls occupy a wide variety of habitats in California including riparian forests, cliff sides, deserts and even residential areas. And they're not particular about where they nest either. These owls may take over the treetop nests of other large birds, or move into an abandoned squirrel's nest, occupy stumps, ledges, barns and "owl boxes" or other manmade structures.

Nesting season is generally between December and July – so we're right in the middle of it, now. Although they only use a nesting site once in a season and don't return to it the next year, the owls are good tenants with both parents looking after their young nestlings and one another. Female Great Horned Owls usually lay 2 or 3 eggs in a clutch and then both parents take turns incubating them, with the male leaving the nest only to hunt down food for his mate.

Great Horned Owls have a somewhat broad diet which can sometimes include other birds (which explains why the Acorn Woodpeckers were so upset that the owl was so nearby) and prey larger than themselves, but they most often stick to mice, rabbits, squirrels and other small mammals, including skunks. Like all owls, the Great Horned Owls tend to swallow their meals whole, and then regurgitate up the indigestible parts like bones and fur in "pellet" form. (It's not uncommon to find complete mouse skulls in these pellets.)

Over the past few weeks, I've been able to spot several of these large handsome birds in the local area – including a female in her nest above an outcropping of mistletoe -- so keep an eye out for them, especially if you're walking just before dusk when they're heading out to hunt or just after dawn when they're heading back to their daytime resting sites. And remember to take lots of photos!

COUCH THEATER DVD PREVIEWS

BY SAM STRUCKHOFF

PICKS OF THE WEEK

"Monuments Men" (PG-13) -- In the final stretch of World War II, the retreating German army had orders to destroy priceless works of art before they could be recovered by the Allies. The Monuments Men were an unlikely fighting force of curators and art historians tasked with going behind enemy lines to save these treasures. George Clooney, Matt Damon, Bill Murray, Cate Blanchett and Jean Dujardin comprise the all-star cast.

Even with a dream-team ensemble and rich source material, the storyline limps along when it should sprint. The crew splits up into their own subplots, united mainly by droning speeches insisting that this is a super-meaningful mission.

"Vampire Academy" (PG-13) -- At a secret Hogwarts-for-vampires located somewhere in Montana, supernaturally pretty vampire teens learn to master their powers. Lissa (Lucy Fry) is special vampire royalty. As a "Moroi," she gets more magic powers -- they're the good witches of vampire world. Rose (Zoey Deutch) is Lissa's protector, a Dhampir -- another type of OK vampire. There's trouble brewing with the evil Strogoi -- that's vampires who act more like, ya'know ... vampires. However, most of the plot revolves around vampire best friends and their choices among the vampire boys. Why can't the undead just be monsters again?

Lucy Fry in 'Vampire Academy'

"About Last Night" (R) -- Two couples in modern-day Los Angeles explore the ins and outs of love, romance, lust and friendship -- all with a lot of comedic energy and frank sex talk. Danny and Bernie (handsome-man Michael Ealy and comedy live-wire Kevin Hart) are best buds playing the field when they both fall into iffy romances. Danny and Debbie (Joy Bryant) are the more virtuous couple. Is it love? Is it dating? Is it true that only fools rush in? Classic quandaries. Bernie and Joan (Regina Hall) despise love, ridicule each other mercilessly, and yet neither one can truly walk away.

DOG OF THE WEEK

"Pompei" (PG-13) -- Swords, sandals, leather armor and lava. These are the things that Pompeii has plenty of. Engaging performances, non-corny dialog and originality -- these apparently had not been invented yet. Milo (Kit Harrington, "Jon Snow" of HBO's "Game of Thrones") is dreamy young slave gladiator who sure can swing a sword. He sets his sparkly blue eyes on an equally pretty noble girl (Emily Browning), who is engaged to an evil Roman senator. Then a volcano erupts, and they run from it.

Much of the film looks like it could be freeze-framed and then printed on the cover of a paperback romance novel. It just needs a better, more suggestive title -- something about swords or heat or eruptions.

"Ramshackle Glam: The New Mom's Haphazard Guide to (Almost) Having It All"
By Jordan Reid
(Running Press, $19)
Reviewed by Molly Ford

One of the biggest changes that can happen to family is the arrival of a child. Jordan Reid, the popular writer and Internet star, shares tips, tricks and hints for navigating this change in her new book.

"Ramshackle Glam: The New Mom's Haphazard Guide to (Almost) Having It All" reads like a long email from a helpful older sister: It feels friendly yet thoughtful. Stories from Reid's background, ranging from being a Harvard University student to an actress in Los Angeles, keep the book interesting and engaging.

The major take-away from the book, besides a confidence that motherhood and the person you were before motherhood are overlapping circles on a Venn Diagram, are Reid's hints on a wide variety of situations. Tangible enough to be useful but smart enough to be helpful, her hints range from how to find your ideal shape in clothes ("Pretend you're meeting up with a friend who you haven't seen in a long time ... what would you wear? That's your 'happy place' silhouette.") to how take a toddler to a restaurant ("request a speedy delivery of a bread basket").

The book covers the changes within a family from pregnancy through toddler-hood, with an emphasis on being able to still feel like yourself while caring for someone else. Some of the myriad of lifestyle tips Reid touches on include: a nursery to match the overall design of your house; stylish outfits to wear while taking care of a baby; how to reconfigure date night with a little one; and shortcuts to throwing a kid-friendly, adult-happy party.

If you want to know how to stay true to yourself while caring for your new addition, this is your read.

The Kitchen Diva BY Angela Shelf Medearis

Asparagus Is Perfect for Spring Recipes

Nothing says spring is here like a beautiful bunch of crisp asparagus. While asparagus is available year-round, it's much better when purchased locally.

Asparagus is easy to select and prepare, and comes in a variety of vibrant colors including green, violet, purple and white. It also grows wild and is commercially available fresh, frozen and canned. The stalks range in size from colossal to small. Various types and colors of asparagus can be used without a noticeable difference in taste, so mix and match colors and sizes for visual interest. It tastes delicious hot or cold.

Asparagus should be crisp and firm, not limp or wrinkled, with tightly closed tips. Dull colors and ridges in the stems are an indication of a lack of freshness. The stalks should not be limp or dry at the cut and of uniform thickness.

If you're planning to use the asparagus on the same day, rinse it under cool water and pat the stalks dry with a paper towel. Smaller stalks can be broken or cut at the point where the stem naturally snaps. Peeling the end of thicker stalks with a paring knife or a vegetable peeler removes any woody stems and can be done up to 2 hours before cooking. Place the prepared asparagus in a plastic bag in the refrigerator to stay crisp.

Never wash or soak fresh asparagus before storing. If the asparagus is bound with a rubber band, remove it, as it will pinch and bruise the stalks. Asparagus can be stored up to two days if the stalks are trimmed and placed upright in a jar with about an inch of water in the bottom. Cover the asparagus with a plastic bag and store the spears in the refrigerator. It also freezes well if blanched first in hot water. Asparagus is a nutritional powerhouse. One-half cup of cooked asparagus contains significant amounts of folic acid, vitamin C, potassium and beta-carotene. It's also a heart-healthy food, and a natural diuretic.

This versatile vegetable works well as a room-temperature appetizer, blended into a soup, as a flavorful side dish, the main ingredient in a colorful salad or as part of a main course like my recipe for Lemon Chicken with Asparagus.

LEMON CHICKEN WITH ASPARAGUS

4 chicken breasts, about 3 pounds, washed and fat trimmed and removed
1 1/2 tablespoons olive oil
4 garlic cloves, chopped
1 red bell pepper, chopped
1/2 pound asparagus, stalks trimmed and cut into 1 inch pieces
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon pepper
1 1/2 teaspoons poultry seasoning
1 teaspoon lemon zest
1/2 cup chicken stock
3 cups cooked rice

1. In a large non-stick skillet, heat the oil over medium high heat. Season the chicken pieces with the salt, pepper and poultry seasoning. Place the chicken, skin-side down, and cook for 5 to 7 minutes. Turn the pieces skin-side up, and cook until golden brown and done, about 5 minutes.
2. Stir in the garlic and red bell pepper. Add the asparagus and cook for 1 minute. Stir in the zest and the chicken stock and bring to a simmer. Cover and cook for 3 minutes. Serve immediately over hot rice.

FLASH, YOU WON'T BE ANY HELP TO THEM IF YOU GET CAUGHT IN THE STORM AND GET YOURSELF KILLED!
WE'LL BE ALL RIGHT, DALE. WE CAN WAIT OUT THE STORM IN THE PART OF THE CRAFT THAT'S STILL INTACT. THERE'S NO NEED TO WORRY.

Yolo continues prison 'realignment' process

From the County of Yolo

In 2011, the governor approved Assembly Bill 109 (Public Safety Realignment) to address state prison overcrowding. "Realignment" moved supervision and incarceration responsibilities for non-serious, non-sexual and non-violent offenders with local county criminal justice systems.

To aid Yolo County in strengthening its related planning efforts, the Crime and Justice Institute was engaged to develop an assessment and assist the county's criminal justice partners in a strategic planning process.

For background on planning to date, visit: http://www.yolocounty.org/home/showdocument?id=25457. The Board of Supervisors expanded the process with outreach and planning meetings, held recently in Yolo County's four cities, to identify community priorities for consideration in further development of criminal justice system objectives.

During these meetings, Yolo County Chief Probation Officer Brent Cardall led the discussion by explaining the obstacles faced in the first couple of years of AB 109 implementation (i.e. a full jail, expanded community offender supervision responsibilities, etc.), programming put in place to manage anticipated impacts and highlights of successes to date. District Attorney Jeff Reisig articulated the current planning process and walked each audience through the mission, principles and goals. Then, each community's police chief presented local crime data from last year to present. The meetings culminated in breakout sessions where participants worked with law enforcement leaders on developing strategies to support meeting the five goals identified by the Community Corrections Partnership.

"The workshops yielded comments and suggested strategies that demonstrated a level of involvement and understanding by the public of the complexity of maintaining and supporting public safety," said Yolo County Chief Probation Officer Brent Cardall in a press release. "We encourage continued community involvement as we grapple with the impacts and opportunities of public safety realignment."

The Community Corrections Partnership will review the products of these recent workshops in a Crime and Justice Institute-facilitated planning session on May 12, 11:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. This public meeting will be held at the County Administration Building at 625 Court Street in Woodland.

Road alert

Caltrans is shutting down lanes along a stretch of the U.S. 50 freeway in Sacramento, and that is expected to cause trouble not only on local freeways, but on West Sacramento city streets such as Jefferson and Harbor boulevards, 5th Street, the Tower Bridge Gateway and West Capitol Avenue.

Construction is scheduled from April 22 to June 25. The first phase involves closing some eastbound lanes on U.S. 50 in downtown Sacramento, sometimes leading to backups into West Sacramento during peak hours.

For details, visit www.fix50.com.

To take a peak at how West Sacramento's roadways are handling the traffic, check out the live cameras at the city's website, www.cityofwestsacramento.org.
